

Stop Being Fooled

It's not hackers selling your stolen personal information

Personal security is a basic human right. No person, company or government has the right to take your possessions, or harass or even bother you. The right to personal security is older than the Constitution and the Magna Carta and is as old as common law, if not from it.

Many within society falsely believe that they can lose many rights by simply possessing electronics, or visiting a web page on the internet. It is not true; your basic human rights cannot be traded away with a clicked upon agreement.
